GREAT THrong CROWDED FIELD IN PARIS TO GREET AMERICAN AT END OF HIS WONDER FLIGHT

All World Watched Progress of "Lucky" Lindbergh; "Flying Fool" Sped With Great Courage Across Mighty Sea

BULLETIN

Le Bouget Flying Field, France, May 21—(AP)—Captain Charles Lindbergh. American aviator, landed here safely tonight, completing his non-stop flight from New York to Paris.

The crowd on the field was so large that the police could not hold them, and there was some doubt whether the aviator would be able to land, so densely were they packed.

At ten minutes after ten the lights were trying to locate the plane which was circling the lower end of the field. The crowd was in a tremendous uproar and the police were having utmost difficulty in keeping them from the danger zone.

BULLETIN

New York, May 21—(AP)—New York will officially begin its celebration of the Lindbergh flight when The Associated Press flashes Mayor Walker that the flyer has landed in Paris. The mayor urged that official news of the success be ushered in with fitting salutes of whistles. Many other cities and towns were planning similar celebrations.

Dublin, May 21—(AP)—President Cosgrave of Ireland today asked the Associated Press to convey a message of congratulation from him to the American people on the occasion of Captain Lindbergh's passing the Irish shores.

12:06 P. M.
New York, May 21—(AP)—The French Cable Company this afternoon announced receipt of official advice from the British government stating that Captain Lindbergh was over Ireland heading toward Cork, at 5:20 o'clock this afternoon, Irish time.

This announcement coincides with an Associated Press dispatch from Belfast reporting the sighting of the plane over Dingle Harbor and saying he was headed for Cork.

The time checks with the schedule of the flight as computed here and Dingle Harbor is on the course as plotted by Lindbergh.

1:15 P. M.
London, May 21—(AP)—Captain Lindbergh's plane is reported by the Exchange Telegraph to have passed over Goleen, in the southwest corner of County Cork, heading southeast.

motorcycle. He had ridden but a short distance when he apparently lost his balance and fell, striking his head on the pavement.

Bleil obtained aid by removing the injured man to the hospital where he was found to be suffering from a skull fracture.

Dixon Girl Caught in Cyclone Which Hit Indianapolis

Two Sterling girls, Miss Marie Hareham and Katherine Winkler and a Dixon girl, Miss Hazel Van Bibber, all employees of the I. N. U. in offices in the respective cities, are enjoying a vacation motor trip. On their first evening on the road (Wednesday), they were seated in the rear of the dining room of a large restaurant in Indianapolis when an unwelcome and rough guest in the guise of a cyclone, arrived and immediately decamped with the front of the building, leaving a most excited and frightened crowd in the dining room. Needless to say, the girls immediately took to the road and left that town far behind, and they report seeing all kinds of wreckage in the wake of the twister.

LAWYERS ASKED TO AID RELIEF WORK IN SOUTH

Chicago Officials Enlist Efforts of Lee County Bar Assn.

An urgent appeal was made to members of the Lee County Bar association today to take immediate steps in aiding in the relief work for the Mississippi valley catastrophe. State's Attorney Mark C. Keller received the communication in the form of a letter from office of Mayor William Hale Thompson and Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Eitelson of Chicago. The matter has been turned over to President Henry S. Dixon of the Lee County Bar association. The appeal:

This is to inform you that the mayors of the cities of New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago have joined in a call for a flood control conference to be held in Chicago on June 2nd, 3rd and 4th, 1927, and have expressed a desire that a representative group of lawyers of the Mississippi Valley States should attend and take part in this important conference, the plan being to formulate recommendations to the President and to the Congress of the United States, looking to prompt and definite plans for the future prevention of flood catastrophe in the Mississippi Valley.

The Mayor of Chicago, William Hale Thompson, has authorized us to assist in interesting the lawyers of all sections of the Valley and you are therefore, urged to present this matter to the lawyers of your community.

Lawyers desiring to attend are requested to send to this office at once the names of those to whom they wish official invitations to be addressed. Please act promptly. This is important.

Attorney G. A. Mammenga of Oregon was in Dixon this morning en route to Bloomington to remain over the week-end.

LEE COUNTY BOY MAKING GOOD IN INDUSTRIAL LIFE

Former Compton Lad is Now Sales Manager of Big Company

The success of a former Lee county boy in the public utilities world and his early rise to the position of general sales manager of the gas appliance department with the James B. Clow & Sons Company of Chicago has been received here. The young man is Glen Carnahan of Compton, son-in-law of Mayor Frank D. Palmer, and well known in Dixon. The Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company of Chicago says of his appointment:

Glen C. Carnahan, manager of the House and Water Heating division since 1921, has resigned from the company to accept a position with the James B. Clow & Sons company as general sales manager of the gas appliance department.

The records show that Glen Carnahan was born on a farm near the little town of Compton, Lee county, Illinois and spent the first sixteen years of his life helping his father, and getting his early education in the country grade schools.

Coming to Chicago, Glen entered Armour Institute and graduated in chemical engineering at the age of twenty-three years. His first employment after graduation was in 1914 for R. B. Harper as an assistant chemist in the laboratory.

Two years later in 1916 he came down town as a water heater salesman and continued this connection with that end of the business until the day of his resignation from the company.

Manager Since 1921
Many changes have been made in that time; from a water heating division of two or three men to a house heating and water heating division numbering about 60 employees. Carnahan has been serving as the manager of this division since 1921.

As an authority on house heating with gas, Glen C. Carnahan has become a national figure in the gas industry. He has been in constant demand since house heating with gas became a factor in the gas business, for talks before conventions and his writings and prepared papers have been real contributions sought after by the gas industry publications throughout the country. His opinions and ideas have been sought by manufacturers of gas-fired house heating and water heating appliances over the country and many of his ideas are in use on these appliances today.

When he took over the division of House and Water Heating the central heating plants in operation in Chicago numbered only a few; today there are over 1500 central heating plants in operation in Chicago. His last year, that of 1926 was perhaps the best year of his management. Water heater sales showed a gain of more than 300 per cent over the year previous. The estimated gain in at-

"SLIM'S" MOTHER CHARTS COURSE IN HIS LONG FLIGHT

Confident He'll Arrive in Paris Safely During the Afternoon

Detroit, Mich., May 21.—(AP)—Continuing her determination not to be "bothered" by interviewers Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of Captain Charles Lindbergh kept her thoughts pretty much to herself today. She was waiting in silence for word of his safe arrival at Paris.

Some suggestion of the strain was given at Cass Technical high school, where Mrs. Lindbergh is an instructor in chemistry. Nowhere, perhaps, was interest greater than at the high school building. Yet, in deference to the mother, no mention of the flight was made before her.

Before young Lindbergh took off Mrs. Lindbergh announced she had every confidence in him.

Charts Son's Course.
John Lodge, Lindbergh's grand uncle today disclosed that Mrs. Lindbergh was charting her son's course from bulletins he telephoned her.

"I'm now certain Charles will reach Paris about 4 p. m., she told Mrs. Lodge.

"She's very anxious, of course," he said, "but she's bearing up wonderfully. She's a worthy mother of such a son."

"She didn't have much opportunity to sleep last night, because I called her whenever there was news."

"There'll be plenty of time to sleep after 4 o'clock this afternoon," she said.

John S. Lonergan of Polo is Called

(Telegraph Special Service)

Polo, Ill., May 21—John S. Lonergan, aged 83, a resident of Polo and vicinity for 55 years, died at 5:30 o'clock this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George McGrath, death being caused by heart trouble. No funeral arrangements had been made at an early hour this afternoon, pending receipt of word from children in the west. Mr. Lonergan was born in Waterford, Ireland, and was married in Dixon, 59 years ago, to Miss Mary Lynch, who preceded him in death eight years ago. He is survived by five sons and two daughters: George of Battle Creek, Mich., Frank and Charles of Portland, Ore., James of Idaho, Fr. Joseph Lonergan of Rockford, Miss Agnes of Chicago and Mrs. Geo. McGrath of Polo.

Mrs. Harold Emmert and daughter Jean Caroe went to Chicago this morning to visit relatives and friends.

ANDREWS TO QUIT AS DRY CHIEF IN AUG., HAYNES TOO

Two Pronounced "Drys" to Succeed in Federal Department

Washington, May 21—(AP)—James M. Doran today took over his duties as commissioner of prohibition and recommended the appointment of Major H. H. White as assistant commissioner.

Washington, May 21—(AP)—The long expected resignation of Lincoln C. Andrews has come and on August 1, by his own request he will end a term which began April 1, 1925 and which marks another milestone in the government's efforts to enforce prohibition.

With the assistant secretary of the treasury, Roy A. Haynes of Ohio, is to go, although the date of his departure is not clear.

The two outstanding figures in federal prohibition enforcement will be succeeded by two pronounced dries. General Andrews will be succeeded by Seymour Lowman, former lieutenant governor of New York, and Haynes will be replaced by Dr. J. M. Doran, a native of North Dakota who becomes commissioner of prohibition.

Andrews' resignation was made public along with grateful words from Secretary Mellon, his chief, but aside from the oral declaration that Haynes would be expected to resign, no mention was made of him. His name did not appear on a page and a half formal statement.

Mr. Haynes presents a case which in many quarters was regarded as a test of strength between Secretary Mellon and Wayne B. Wheeler, chief counsel of the Anti-Saloon League. Since his appointment as "acting commissioner," upon the solicitation of Mr. Wheeler and Senators Willis and Foss of Ohio, the question of a permanent appointment had been dominant in prohibition circles.

After Mr. Mellon's return from Europe, Wheeler again became active in Haynes' behalf. Within recent days however, the dry organization has confined itself to statements favoring a commissioner friendly to the dry cause.

Baccalaureate Dixon High School May 29

The Baccalaureate services of the Dixon high school will be held in the Assembly park auditorium, Sunday, May 29 at 7:30. Rev. E. C. Lumsden, district superintendent of the Methodist church, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. Rev. Lumsden is a resident of Dixon and well known by most of the members of the graduating class. Plans are being made for a union service of the churches for that evening.

City Treasurer Eleanor E. Powell will spend the week-end in the Charles Hitt home in Rockford.

BULLETIN

London, May 21—(AP)—Dispatches from three points in southwestern Ireland late today confirmed that Captain Charles Lindbergh had spanned the Atlantic, with the most hazardous part of his New York to Paris flight behind him.

The plane was sighted by a collier off the southern Irish coast, later over Smerwick Harbor and then over Dingle Bay, approximately 600 miles from Paris.

The dispatches indicate that, in leaving the Atlantic behind at Smerwick Harbor, he went south over the peninsula separating that harbor from Dingle bay, and then altered his course slightly proceeding south-southeasterly toward Cork.

New York, May 21—(AP)—A lone young eagle, Capt. Chas. Lindbergh, whose daring has thrilled the world, from all indications was well over the Atlantic ocean today.

Behind him were New York and most of the dangerous Atlantic area; before him at the end of an arc of a great circle were Paris and fame and fortune.

Increased speed by the Lindbergh plane as indicated by his position at sea 500 miles off Ireland at 3:10 o'clock this morning (eastern daylight time, or 6:10 a. m. central time) may bring him to Paris around midnight (French time) or an hour ahead of the approximate schedule called for by 36 hours of flying.

With a wind at his tail and a lessening load of gas, the plane could whip up a speed of from 125 to 130 miles an hour if Lindbergh opened up his motor.

Various reports placed Lindbergh far ahead of his schedule but indications were that he was pursuing his course at a somewhat increased speed.

Captain Lindbergh, after hopping off at 7:52 a. m., quit New Found-

Potter Endorses Pre-School Child Confab.

Superintendent I. B. Potter of the Dixon public school system this morning made the following statement concerning the Infant and Pre-School Child conference to be held under the auspices of the Woman's club and state Welfare Department in the Masonic building, June 7-8:

"This work is right along in line with what the public schools are doing in the way of a health program. Our school nurse, Miss Bertha Hanes, spends most of her time looking after the physical condition and welfare of the students who are in school. This conference regarding children of the preschool age should be attended by all mothers whose children are about to start their school career, and particularly the mothers of the children who are ready to start in kindergarten and first grade. The primary object of this conference is to see that children start to school physically fit, without the numerous handicaps that often cause the children to be retained in one grade or another."

fuel gas consumption by appliances sold by the House and Water heating division for 1926 was $57,597,000 cubic feet. The gross amount of sales for the division was $467,780.93.

In his new position he will be, figuratively speaking, on the other side of the table, but still in the industry, and we know that many good things are still to come from the thoughts of Glen Carnahan.

"SLIM" NEARS PARIS

land at 7:15 p. m. Friday, Eastern daylight time, after flying about 1,100 miles of his 3,800 mile journey. Alone and without a signaling device, but with all the newest aids to air navigation, the 25-year-old flier roared on and each hour served to decrease his hazard. As his fuel decreased his speed could increase. And wind favored him. Lack of sleep was considered by aviation authorities as his greatest danger.

Lindbergh covered the first 1,100 miles in 11 hours and 23 minutes. He flew like a homing pigeon and held close to his schedule. These 1,100 miles provided ample test for the craft, authorities said, and barring unexpected adverse weather or trouble, they expected the plane to carry on without difficulty.

The flier lost 800 of his original load of 5,150 pounds with the passage of each 1,000 miles. Some estimates were he would reach Paris about midnight tonight, eastern daylight time or 5 a. m. Sunday, French time.

His speed normally is 100 miles. Naval hydrographers, however, said he should reach Paris about 3:30 this afternoon or 8:30 p. m. Paris time. Winds at his back, it was thought, would increase his speed to about 120 miles an hour.

The fact that he steered by compass alone was not regarded as a handicap in view of the way he maintained his course to New Foundland.

Wishes for "Lucky's" success were voiced by aviators throughout the country and by President Coolidge. Prayers were said for him in churches. The crowd at the Sharkey-Maloney fight stood a minute in silent prayer.

By early evening it appeared Paris was just as excited as it had been over the ill-fated flight of Nungesser and Coli.

Big crowds gathered in front of every newspaper office waiting for bulletins.

The Place d'Opera was jammed with people watching a moving electric sign and there were so many Americans in front of the office of the Paris edition of the New York Herald-Tribune, that the police renewed their efforts to keep the sidewalks clear.

PARIS PLANES WELCOME

Paris, May 21—(AP)—Captain Lindbergh will come into France tonight with a strong quartering wind from the southwest behind him if he crosses the Atlantic.

Weather reports indicated that the favorable conditions extending over the English channel will probably last until the "Spirit of St. Louis" is well over France. Every available signal light will be on.

This afternoon's weather report indicated it would be cloudy in the Paris region tonight.

Lindbergh's fearlessness and his will to win have aroused the admiration of the French public.

"Magnificent," "What daring!" "I hope he succeeds!"

These are some of the excited exclamations heard. A few have expressed disapproval that an American may win where Nungesser and Coli failed, but the great body of the people are intense with interest. The flying field at Le Bourget is in readiness.

A constantly increasing pile of telegrams and cable messages is waiting for the flier and plans to entertain him are growing hourly.

"He Has Made It"

Le Bourget, France, May 21—(AP)—The exultant cry, "He has made it," ran rapidly from mouth to mouth this afternoon as a waiting crowd here heard the report that Lindbergh had been sighted off Ireland.

Eagerly watchers scanned the sky although it was known that the flier could not arrive for several hours.

A storm, apparently local, passed over the flying field late this afternoon. A sharp shower fell but the sun broke through by 6 o'clock.

Everything was ready for Lindbergh's reception.

American flags fluttered from the entrance of the administration building. The wind was very stiff from the northwest.

Two squads of police marched into the reservation, one squad guarding the building from which Ambassador Herriek will watch the landing. The other squad took possession of the landing field to insure safety for the American flier.

Much excitement was created shortly before 5 o'clock by the arrival of a Fokker plane similar to that of Lindbergh's. It was a regular passenger liner from Berlin.

12:34 P. M.

Cork, Ireland, May 21—(AP)—The civil guard headquarters here, has received confirmation that Captain Lindbergh's New York-Paris plane passed over Swerwick Harbor, County Kerry, toward Cork.

12:25 P. M.

London, May 21—(AP)—The Exchange Telegraph reports that an airplane believed to be Lindbergh's passed over Swerwick Harbor, County Kerry late this afternoon headed in a southerly direction. This would take him over Dingle Bay as previously reported, Swerwick Harbor being on the other side of the peninsula which separates Dingle Harbor from the Atlantic.

Hundred Templars of Dixon Will Go to Beloit Sunday

Grand Commander Glen F. Coe of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of Illinois of this city, accompanied by members of his staff and a Hundred Sir Knights, members of Dixon Commandery, No. 21, will go to Beloit, Wis. Sunday to attend the annual Ascension Sunday service.

By special dispensation, the commandery of northern Illinois will unite with the Wisconsin Grand Commandery in the observance of Ascension day.

A feature of the day will be a parade of 600 Sir Knights in uniform Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock through the business district of Beloit, reaching to the Fairbanks-Morse auditorium, where the services will be held.

Grand Commander Coe returned home this morning from St. Paul, Minn., where he attended the annual convocation of the Minnesota Grand Commandery. Last week he spent at Warrensburg, Mo., in attendance with the annual convocation of the Missouri Grand Commandery.

BENEFIT CONCERT FOR DUNBAR CENTER NOW PLANNED

Singer of City Asked to Donate Services to This Project

Rehearsals for the Dunbar Community Center concert, which is to take place in the near future, will begin Sunday, at 2:30 p. m., at the Methodist church. The choir of all the different churches are urged to join in this movement.

"Dixon is noted for its great philanthropic spirit in all good enterprises and responded in a generous way when the plea was made for necessary equipment in the opening of the Dunbar Center, which, so far, has proved a wonderful success in many ways, providing a place for recreation, also social and religious gatherings for the negro brethren. Nearly all new enterprises must put on drives, or use other means of raising funds, hence the concert. The dream of the Center is to have a room fitted into a gymnasium, as it means to them what our Y. M. C. A. means to its members. It is sadly in need of a new roof, and a thousand dollars or more is needed for these two projects. In Dixon going to prove, as she has always done, her willingness to help.

If so, then the plea is for all those who sing to attend tomorrow and offer your voice in the great chorus of voices as one of the ways in which the thousand dollars is to be raised.

The Y. M. C. A. band is going to do its part in the great concert, and the directors and choir will surely be willing to do theirs.

Prof. Johnston will direct the chorus of voices as they render the two beautiful anthems, "Break Forth in Joy," by Simpson, and "The Radiant Morn' Has Passed Away," by Woodward. Singers are asked to be at the church promptly at 2:30 Sunday.

Dixon Golfers are Invited to Clinton

Members of the Dixon Country Club have been invited to spend Sunday, May 29, on the links of the Clinton, Iowa, Country club. An exhibition match will be played, starting at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in which the following will participate: Les Madison, professional from the Phoenix Country club of Phoenix, Ariz.; Art Andrews of Davenport, champion of Iowa; Walter Carberry, Clinton pro and Dr. Barton of Davenport, amateur champion of the Davenport Country Club.

The greens will be open to the members of the Dixon Country club during the morning and in the afternoon those attending will witness the exhibition match play.

Bankers of District to Meet Here Monday

About 200 bankers from northern Illinois will assemble in Dixon Monday for the annual meeting of the Northwest district of the Illinois Bankers association. All of the sessions will be held at the Elks club and at the noon hour a luncheon will be served by the house committee to the visitors. Two special Pullmans, bearing officers of the state association will arrive over the NorthWestern from Chicago to attend the meeting.

SECTIONALISM DEAD

Memorial day today is a day of devotion to the memories of Americans who have died in war. Prior to 1919 the day was almost entirely devoted to memorial exercises in honor of the Union soldiers, with the G. A. R. organizations conducting the ceremonies. Since the World War, however, the scope of the federal Memorial day has broadened, and the day-made a holiday by the government-is devoted now to tributes not only to the heroes of the '60s, but to the heroes of every war in which lives were sacrificed to the cause of country.

In the South the day is observed as in the North, for the great United States of America today is a confederation of state units that know neither North nor South nor East nor West. In the flag of the republic the star of each state is of equal size, and not one is designated by section-Atlanta Constitution.

PLEDGE TO THE FLAG

I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible with liberty and justice for all.

Menus for the Family

BREAKFAST-Grape fruit, asparagus omelet, whole wheat muffins, milk; coffee.

DINNER-Chicken fricassee, new potatoes in cream, savoury wax beans, salad of radishes, onions and sweet green peppers, frozen custard, crisp cookies, milk, coffee.

Savoury Wax Beans.
Four medium-sized skinned onions, 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons stock, 1 pound wax beans, 2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon sugar, 1-2 teaspoon celery seed.

Remove head and tail from beans. If beans are stringless, wash and good; if not, cut a thin slice from each edge of bean to remove strings. Cut each pod in three or four pieces diagonally across. Drop in boiling water to cover and cook until tender and water is evaporated. In the meantime peel and chop onions. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, add onions and cook until a golden straw color. Add stock, cooked beans, remaining butter, lemon juice or vinegar, salt, sugar and celery seed. Stir lightly with a fork and bring to the boiling point but do not let boil. Serve very hot.

Miss Moore to Wed John Craft

Mrs. Paul S. Moore of Ashton entertained with a dinner party Sunday in honor of Miss Orva Moore, whose engagement to John C. Craft of Chicago has recently been announced.

Mrs. Grover W. Gehant of Dixon and sister, Miss Leola Gehant of Ashton entertained a party of sixteen ladies Saturday at the Quick home, honoring Miss Orva Moore. The party was a bridge-luncheon and miscellaneous shower, the affair being a total surprise to Miss Moore.

The gift were very beautiful and useful and were consigned under an umbrella made of ripped crepe paper. The color scheme of the home was dainty pastel shades of orchid, pink and yellow.

Miss Moore will be the guest at a number of pretty events during the next week. Mr. and Mrs. John D. Charters will entertain next Tuesday evening in her honor and Mrs. Otto Blum will entertain on Friday afternoon. On Saturday of next week Misses Eva Hunt, Hilda McIntosh and Misses Eva Hunt, Hilda McIntosh and Mrs. Clarence Young will entertain with a bridge-luncheon in honor of Miss Moore and Miss Mary Griffith at the Malmberg Tavern at Oregon.

Sunday School Class Had Pleasant Party

Mrs. A. E. Marth very delightfully entertained her class of the Methodist Sunday school at her home on Friday evening. The girls were furnished much merriment by the lively games and contests. Prizes were won by the Misses Merna Suter, Joyce Warren and Ruth Keyes. The happy evening closed with the serving of delicious refreshments.

Concluding Session of Convention Ill. Feder.

Danville, Ill., May 21-(AP)-Mrs. Charles J. Trainor of Chicago, retiring treasurer, was called a "czar" in a fight which developed over legislative endorsements, in the concluding session of the 32nd convention of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs Friday.

She had spoken several times on a proposal to rescind action of the 31st convention and open the way to endorse legislation without the present necessity of referring it back to the 625 clubs in the state, when Mrs. A. H. Briggs, of Chicago declared she was "still democratic" and protested that "service of a czar wasn't needed."

The argument over the proposal created the only lively session in the most placid convention the federation has had in years. By a vote of 149 to 17 the amendment of last year was rescinded, so that legislation may now be endorsed by the executive board and the state convention.

Leading the fight to keep the amendment was the newly elected secretary, Mrs. M. P. Kelly of Watseka who declared she regretted "that endorsement could be left in the hands of a few women." It was only fair, she said, "that all women all over the state have a chance to register their opinions."

Mrs. John T. Mason of Aurora, suggested that the legislative forums and deferred action by the executive board would give club women of all the state ample time to express their opinions. Mrs. Richard J. Barr of Joliet, wife of the republican leader in the senate said that under the amendment in force since the last convention the federation's hands were tied. "Unless we rescind it," she said, "other women's organizations will rush ahead of us and take action and we will be left out."

In the only election contest, Mrs. Kelly was elected secretary over Mrs. C. B. Scott, of Wenona by a vote of 213 to 173. Mrs. W. F. Farrell, Chicago, was elected first vice president; Mrs. David McLean, Chicago, was elected treasurer, and Mrs. G. W. Plummer was re-elected parliamentary.

Downstate delegates elected to the general federation convention next month were: Mrs. Mary A. Wall, Murphysboro; Mrs. A. J. Watson, Marion; Mrs. W. H. Russell, Viola; Mrs. R. J. Barr, Joliet; Mrs. J. A. Dixon, Avon; Mrs. C. B. Scott, Wenona; Mrs. J. D. McKelvey, Sparta and Mrs. George Edmondson of Clinton.

Moline and Chicago women made bids for next year's convention.

CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN (Franklin Grove)

The evangelistic meeting conducted during the past two weeks have been a season of spiritual awakening in our church and community. Rev. Harick presented Gospel truth in a forceful, convincing and pleasing manner. As a result of this effort, fifteen were added to the church, four re-claimed, viz: George Hawbecker, Jacob, Clutz, Mrs. Sarah Smith and Mrs. Ed. Blank; eleven by baptism, viz: Ila Blocher, Muriel Weybright, Alta Shriver, Scott Smith, Neva Richwine, Pauline Hawbecker, Emily Heffer, Ruth Heffer, Clifford Heffer, Mrs. Alta Shriver and Vira Butterbaugh. The concluding service was last Wednesday evening, at which time the ordinances of footwashing, the Lord's supper and the communion were observed.

Next Sunday morning-Sunday school at 9:30. Let every one be present on time, with a studied lesson and a mind to learn. Preaching at 10:30. This is the day suggested by our Mission Board for our annual conference offering, so we will take an offering for this purpose.

Sunday evening beginning at 8 o'clock, the Bachlaureate service will be held in our church. Rev. A. E. Thomas will deliver the sermon. On account of this service there will be no C. W. or Y. P. D.

The evangelistic meeting conducted during the past two weeks have been a season of spiritual awakening in our church and community. Rev. Harick presented Gospel truth in a forceful, convincing and pleasing manner. As a result of this effort, fifteen were added to the church, four re-claimed, viz: George Hawbecker, Jacob, Clutz, Mrs. Sarah Smith and Mrs. Ed. Blank; eleven by baptism, viz: Ila Blocher, Muriel Weybright, Alta Shriver, Scott Smith, Neva Richwine, Pauline Hawbecker, Emily Heffer, Ruth Heffer, Clifford Heffer, Mrs. Alta Shriver and Vira Butterbaugh. The concluding service was last Wednesday evening, at which time the ordinances of footwashing, the Lord's supper and the communion were observed.

Next Sunday morning-Sunday school at 9:30. Let every one be present on time, with a studied lesson and a mind to learn. Preaching at 10:30. This is the day suggested by our Mission Board for our annual conference offering, so we will take an offering for this purpose.

Sunday evening beginning at 8 o'clock, the Bachlaureate service will be held in our church. Rev. A. E. Thomas will deliver the sermon. On account of this service there will be no C. W. or Y. P. D.

The offering taken last Sunday for the storm sufferers amounted to over $105.

CHURCH BUSINESS MEETING

Following the regular evening church service of the Dixon Christian church tomorrow there will be called business meeting of the congregation to consider the report and recommendations of the parsonage committee and the board officers concerning the plans and contract for the new parsonage. The business meeting will open at 8:30 p. m., Charles W. Johnson, chairman of the committee, announces.

A new event has been added to the camp schedule this year for the older boys. This is archery, the sport of Kings. The older Braves and Warriors will be given a chance to demonstrate their skill with the slender shaft.

Well, the Tribes are gathering from far and wide and it is hoped there will be room for all who wish to go.

BIG CHIEFS ARE GETTING READY FOR THEIR CAMP

Weather Jinx Buried at Meeting Held this Morning

The Big Chiefs of old Yomechas Camp put their heads together and this morning somehow, somewhere, they procured a shovel and buried the weather jinx. Yes sir! From now on the weather jinx will keep his hands out of the affairs of the Y. Camp. The Tribes of Yomechas are gathering for their annual powwow at Yomechas Lake. Big Chiefs, Little Chiefs, Warriors, and Braves are signing up fast these days for their places at camp.

Judging from the line-up so far there will be a real peppy group of campers this year. A look into the future reveals a lot of good eats, a good cook, and a real appetite to enjoy it. Stunts, stories, swimming, hiking, fishing, horseshoes, more eats, sleep, the Battle of Bunker Hill, diving, more swimming, camp fires, wood-gathering, etc. There will be an opportunity to study nature and campcraft, a knowledge of First Aid will be available.

TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHT BENEFITS.

What is the value of a transatlantic airplane flight? What is a successful flight worth to humanity? And, if it has value, what is the value of an unsuccessful flight—a flight such as Nungesser's that ends in disaster?

These are questions that many have been asking lately. It has been rather hard to reconcile the questionable benefits with the great risks involved. Somehow, the price has seemed too great. It has made us feel that, after all, the game is hardly worth the candle.

Yet that feeling is a mistaken one. It is mistaken, wholly aside from the lessons that each flight teaches aviation.

For bravery, even in this well-cushioned day and age, always has value. Hardly any price is too high to pay if we can realize, once more, that we still breed men to whom life is something that may be risked cheerfully, nonchalantly, gallantly.

An aviator may take off from the midst of a cheering multitude, head his plane out over the ocean, disappear in the mists and never be seen again. He is, as we say, lost at sea. His flight has failed, and he has paid the great penalty. And it seems a terrible waste.

But it is not. Dying, alone in the rolling Atlantic, the lost aviator has left something fully as precious as the memory of a completed flight. He has given his life for no material gain. We will not be able to travel faster, get rich quicker or live more easily because of what he did, but for a boon that is entirely spiritual, we have gained immeasurably.

The aviator has taken his place with the long list of those who have found death a thing easy to face and life a thing from which it is easy to part. And we—we who live comfortably at home, sheltered from danger and alarms are the gainers.

There is value in an ocean flight, even if it ends in death. We are all better for it. And to the flyers who risk their lives we might say, as Nietzsche makes Zarathustra say:

"Thou hast made danger thy calling; and in that I find nothing unworthy."

THE SOVIET AND THE MISSIONARIES.

Out of experiences in China our missionaries are likely to get a different idea of soviet Russia. Many of us have been unable to understand how communism has obtained sympathetic ears of the clergy. We do not know how strong the sympathy was among the missionaries, but at least there has appeared to be such an element. Terrible experiences in China under soviet influences may have some effect in changing the attitude. On the subject of the Christian religion in Russia, the Dearborn Independent says:

Never since Christianity was first struggling with the pagan faith of Rome has it been so challenged as by bolshevism. Never before in the history of the world has a great government controlling one-sixth of the land surface of the earth proudly proclaimed itself atheistic. Today Russia is actively attempting to stamp out religion. It is not only a negative but a positive attack. The bolshevik would not only banish God from the heavens, but usher in communism on the earth.

Children are made the focal point in the attack. Many have deserted the religious services. Strict orders have been given that the 86,000 teachers in Russia who are non-communists shall refrain from supporting religion in the schools. They fear even to answer questions honestly. The bolsheviks each that all ideas of God are superstitious myths. They declare that religion is the "opiate" of the people. The communist party in article 13 of its program requires of all its members anti-religious work. The weekly magazine, Without God, has a circulation of 200,000. Another periodical, The Atheist in the Factory, circulates largely among the laboring masses. In many of the local magazines there is a "without God" corner. In April, 1925, was founded the Union of Atheists, a missionary organization which has for its purpose the weening of Christians from their faith. In 1926 its membership exceeded 114,000. The most effective work is carried on in the villages where there is an "economical" approach. Active propaganda is carried on to convince the illiterate peasants that Christ never lived, that Christianity has been holding them in "bondage."

One of these days a hen is going to refuse to nurse a litter of wolf cubs. That will be news.

Two of the least thankful persons in the world for their recent buggy ride are perhaps Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray.

"Britons Praise U. S. Libraries," says a headline. But they don't like our bookkeeping.

A Paris scrubwoman is rated as a millionaire. She must have cleaned up.

The lamp posts in Paris are to bear numbers corresponding to the houses nearby. How is a man going to know where to hang his hat at 4 a. m. after a hard night with a sick friend?

Certainly Jonah could live in the belly of the whale, says a scientist. And there are a few million Americans living in apartments who will verify it.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The Tines thought their ride was grand. A camel loves to run on sand, and so the one they sat upon was heading for a beach. It reached the shoreline by and by, where roaring waves were washing high, but Mister Camel kept the bunch of Tines out of reach.

Said Scouty, with a sort of frown, "I wish that I could now get down. I've had enough of camel rides to last me for a while." Just then they saw old Daffydoo behind some trees, peeking through. The way the Tines hung on tight just made the old man smile.

Then Clowny yelled, with trace of fear, "We're mighty glad that you are here. This bumping's getting pretty rough. Please make your camel stop, of course we all were glad to take this ride, but now we kinda ache. I can't hang on much longer, and I fear that I will flop." So friendly Daffy shouted "Whoa!" The camel's pace was shortly slow.

and the clumsy desert beast ran up to him and stopped. "All right, hop down," old Daffy said. "I'll tightly hold the camel's head." And almost in an instant all the Tynmites had dropped.

"Oh, look," said Carpy, "in that tree. There's something that appeals to me. A funny kind of monkeys and they're having lots of fun. Let's hike for there and watch the bunch." The Tines thought that quite a bunch, and very shortly all the tribe were on a merry run.

The monkeys squealed to see them come and everything was all a-hum. "Please do some tricks," was Coppy said. At that a monk never fails. So 'round they ran from limb to limb. As acrobats they were in trim, and all the Tines laughed to see them hanging by their tails.

SAINT and SINNER

When Bob, with Faith by his side, tried to drive his car to the parking place opposite the courthouse, he found Courthouse Square so jammed with a milling mob of people, afoot and in cars, that he was forced to park three blocks from the building in which the drama, entitled "The State versus Cherry Lane Wiley," was being enacted. A mounted policeman plunged through the dense throng to clear a path for Cherry's sister and Bob at the street crossing, and two mounted officers were required to escort them up the walk leading to the courthouse and through the mob that was literally storming the locked doors of the room in which the trial was being held.

Cherry, the beautiful little star of this sordid drama of real life, had had just sufficient warning of Churchill's intention to put her on the stand that afternoon to change, during the lunch hour, to the costume which had long since been decided upon by Churchill as the most effective for the stern business of courting sympathy from the jury.

Faith slipped into her seat, breathless and disheveled after her battle with the mob, just as Churchill was whispering his final word of encouragement to his client before she took the stand.

"Oh, Faith! I thought you weren't going to get back in time," Cherry turned from her lawyer to seize her sister's hand. "Kiss me, Faith, darling, and—and for God's sake, don't lose your temper." For Cherry, no, I'm afraid!" Her voice broke and suddenly the bright head dropped upon Faith's shoulder.

"Just remember every minute that you're innocent, darling," Faith whispered, her lips moving against the copper-and-gold curls.

Churchill bent over them, gently took Cherry's hand from Faith's, assisted the shrinking little figure to rise and led her to the witness chair. It was an expert bit of stage management, for against Churchill's great bulk Cherry's body was like that of a small child.

There had been little need of Churchill's terse command, "Remember to look wide-eyed and innocent, keep your voice sweet and low but distinct, and for God's sake, don't lose your temper," for Cherry, no matter how much she might have tried, could not have looked anything but childish, wide-eyed and innocent. As she stood beside the witness chair, her tiny, white hand upraised to take the oath, the wisdom of Churchill's choice of a costume was obvious. Faith had made the dress according to a design approved by the astute lawyer, and before it had been finished, Churchill had wisely superintended the fitting, ruthlessly overruling Cherry's objection to an unfashionably long skirt.

As she raised her wide golden eyes to gaze toward heaven when taking her solemn oath, a shaft of sunlight from a dingy courtroom window turned her curls to a blaze of glory. A startled gasp of profound admiration rose from the densely packed audience.

Body by Fisher

You have frequently heard that the Greater Oakland Six is built to standards of accuracy once thought impossible except in hand-built cars. And perhaps you have doubted the statement, believing that no car so low in price could possibly be manufactured with such scrupulous super-precision...

But if you could see the Greater Oakland Six being built, your own eyes would convince you—for Oakland is going to unheard-of lengths to keep the Greater Oakland Six the best-built car of its price in the world; to enhance to an even more marked degree its reputation for stamina, long life and low cost maintenance.

SYNOPSIS

Emmett Murtough, a roistering young man of Kiltanmaul, a village on the west coast of Ireland near Knockbotherum, hears the call of America. He is in love with Sheila Kildare, daughter of Old Tom Kildare, who let his farm go to ruin when he "talked politics." Both Emmett and Sheila visit the Knockbotherum Fair and have their fortunes told by Mother O'Reilly who has long been famous for her prophecies.

Mother O'Reilly turned to the shelf behind her where good luck trinkets were kept. From amongst the lot she selected a locket and held it out to Sheila. It was round, rimmed with a silver band and transparent. Between two thin circles of glass was a shamrock, the four petals flatly pressed. "Tis good luck, darling, an' Mother O'Reilly herself promises ye it will bring ye happiness. Wear it always, darling, an' never lose it, for if you do the Imps, bad cess to them, will be climbing yer back to make trouble for ye."

Sheila held it close to her breast, her eyes shining. "I'll never, never lose it," she cried in perfect faith.

"An', acushla, now; just a shilling; not for the charm," the old fortune teller hastily added, "but because charms are no good to one unless there's a bit of silver passes the palms, as ye well know."

Sheila opened her purse and placed the shilling in the old woman's hand. She felt a sudden

CHAPTER TWO. Off For America!

The fair at Knockbotherum was a fortnight away and the Murtough was in his element. He had made his peace with Peter Harrigan, his maternal uncle and had won him over not only to the great adventure across the sea but had actually argued the old man, who was known throughout the Kiltanmaul country as a miserly one, into providing passage money to New York. The villagers were not particularly impressed with this, however. They did not attribute the gift so much to Emmett's powers of persuasion.

"A lucky man is Peter," they said in the Widow O'Farrell's Inn. "Sure an' the boy would amount to nothin' at all, at all, here in Kiltanmaul; save to get himself mixed up with too many girls for his own good. An' who can tell but that it might cost the old Harrigan a penny or two."

But Emmett gave no heed to these wisecracks who knew too much. Indeed, he walked on feathers, as the saying is, and his chin pointed high as he boasted to his comrades of what he would do in America and the riches that would be his. Listeners were few, however, for the Murtough was none too popular with the fellows of his own age; he was too much of a ladies' man to be taken seriously by those young stalwarts who braved the sea or who bent their backs over flourishing farms. Sheila Kildare was his best audience. For Sheila dreamed, too, and while she loved Kiltanmaul, and her love for it never was to end until her last breath, still her fresh imagination plucked from the boastfulness of Emmett a hope near to her own heart.

"Sheila, darling, it's a great man I'll be over there, where every fellow has his chance an' there are none to scoff an' scorn the whole day through. Who could do anything at all here in Kiltanmaul; the dirty little village! An' with these people who look at ye as if ye were as familiar as the horse an' gig of Doctor Carmody, an' no more. Just because they have seen ye about since the time ye was a small acut they think ye'll amount to nothing at all, at all. Why, down in Knockbotherum didn't they tell me about Tim O'Malley who went from there a dozen years ago an' now he's on the police force in New York an' he wears a uniform an' gets a tremendous salary every month. It's a politician he is, too."

"It's a great man I'll be over there, where every fellow has his chance."

"Oh, Emmett, I do hope everything turns out well," Sheila cried wistfully. "But it's such a long ways over there, miles an' miles across the water, an' everybody'll be a stranger to ye!"

"Old Mother O'Reilly told me I'd do well among strangers," and then Emmett remembered the admonishment of the fortune teller. "An', Sheila, she said I should have a wife to hold me down an' to help make me successful."

"Emmett!"

"I'd be asking ye to go with me now, Sheila, darling, but I want to get started an' to have something to bring ye to when the time comes. An' will ye wait for me?"

"An' how will I be knowing ye want me?" Sheila asked. There was no coquetry in her voice. This girl looked on life gravely in spite of her joyous spirit, and the soil of the Kiltanmaul country gripped her through the generations of forefathers who had passed their lives there.

"Ah, Sheila, ye know I've been wanting ye all these years," Emmett insisted.

"Aye, but ye played fast and loose with many a girl, I've heard."

"Well, I've done me bit of philandering," the Murtough admitted, and not without pride.

"I'm wondering if I had been as easy as the other girls if ye would have asked me to have the ring."

"Sure, now, Sheila, if a man steps by the roadside come night to chin with a broth of a girl is he the worst for it?"

DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS

THIS HAS HAPPENED

T. Q. CURTIS selects three girls from his list of department store to come into his home as his wards for one year, because he wants to help them further ambitions each one has professed. BILLY WELLS, anxious to be a concert violinist, is the only one of the three who is in earnest. NYDA LOMAX and WINNIE SHELTON like to enjoy the old man's generosity.

Billy is secretly engaged to DAI ROMANIE, nephew of MRS. MEADOWS, and is deeply hurt when she observes he is also paying affectionate attention to Winnie.

Unknown to T. Q. the girls learn he intends to adopt one of them when the year is up, and Nyda and Winnie turn the house into a place of intrigue. Strangely involved in these intrigues are Mrs. Meadows, Dal and EDDIE HANNING, Nyda's former sweetheart.

T. Q.'s safe is robbed, and SAVERS, the butler, throws suspicion on Billy whom he saw in the library and the hallway at a late hour. Billy, who is innocent, calls on CLAY CURTIS, son of T. Q., to help her. Clay is disinterested himself and is living at the Wells home in a poor part of town working in a factory by day and writing music at night. Billy tells him she suspects Nyda and Eddie Hanning and Clay makes Eddie confess. Nyda then tells that she and Eddie have been married the whole year. T. Q. agrees not to prosecute them.

Clay proposes to Billy, telling her he has made a success with his music. He wants to help her in her study of music. Before she can answer him a telegram comes from Romaine and the spell of her infatuation for Romaine is again upon her. That night at dinner, RALPH TRIMMAN, young capitalist, makes insinuations before the entire party that Romaine is an accomplice in a fortune teller, NAMI NADH, who was run out of town. This is a stab at Billy's heart and she is some time recovering. Later when she goes to the music room to get her violin to play for the party, she hears a noise in the library and opening the door finds Winnie, a legal document in her hand. When she sees Billy, her face is suffused with anger and hatred.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LIV

WINNIE did not trust herself to make another appearance in the drawing room after her scene with Billy in the library. From her room she sent Viola with a message that she was suffering from a headache. At ten o'clock the entire party, with the exception, of course, of T. Q. and Mrs. Meadows, motored to the Country Club for dancing. Dal brought Billy home at half-past one, keeping her for another fifteen minutes in his car parked before the house, as he made ardent love to her.

She was so happy that she slept little, but when she did sleep, terrible dreams disturbed her rest, made her cry out with fright. Toward morning she fell into the deep sleep of exhaustion and did not awaken until ten o'clock.

Mrs. Meadows, arranging flowers in the drawing room, told her that Winnie was ill in bed, and that she had sent word that she would not be down for luncheon.

At two o'clock Dal called for her and there were three happy hours of driving in the crisp cold air of late February. Because she was afraid of seeing anxiety in his eyes she did not tell Dal that Winnie was ill or claimed to be.

She was taking off her hat and coat in her own room, the door of which stood open, when she saw T. Q. Curtis, home from the office earlier than usual, pass through the hall. He went to the door to call out to greet her, when she saw that he was knocking at Winnie's door across the hall.

"Winnie may be really sick," she murmured to herself, sorry that she had not been to see the girl before. T. Q. looked worried, as he listened for the small voice bidding him to come in.

T. Q. was worried. Something in

"Please come home, Daddy Curtis," that sweet, small voice had implored him.

The tremulous words with which Winnie had summoned him by telephone had frightened him.

"I—I feel so bad, Daddy Curtis. I—I feel so bad! And I want to see you now!" That sweet, small voice had implored him.

If his thoughts could have been put into words as he opened the door, they would have been a prayer something like this: "Good Lord, help me to do the right thing by this child who has been so dear to me this last year."

"Hello, Daddy Curtis!" Winnie's weak, sweet voice called out to him. "Thanks for—coming—so soon."

"Why, Winnie, child? What are you crying about? Do you feel so ill as all that?" he said with gruff kindness as he stooped over the bed and took her limp little hand.

"Sit down here by me," Winnie begged forlornly, moving her tiny body a little more toward the middle of the silk-draped bed. "Last night, Daddy Curtis, at dinner, it came over me all of a sudden that in just one more week we—me and you—wouldn't be dining together, you and I. Don't you realize, dear Daddy Curtis, that the year is gone? Just one more week!" she repeated desolately.

"I—Winnie, child, I have realized it, and I assure you that it makes me more unhappy than—than you mentioned it, that in so short a time I shall be a daughterless, lonely old man again."

It was glad that she was not looking into his eyes, for he was afraid that she could read there the lie that he had told her. For he had a vivid mental picture of that legal document which he had locked away in a secret drawer of his desk. And that document was the best proof in the world that, if Billy Wells would accept his offer of adoption, he would not be a lonely, daughterless man after the year was up.

"What am I going to do?" Winnie began to cry like a heartbroken child. "I—I can't bear to leave you, Daddy Curtis. I—I've grown so awfully fond of you."

"I've tried to be like a father to you, my dear," T. Q. said huskily. "I'm very glad if I have made you happy this year."

"I've got a father!" Winnie burst out at him, with a spark of anger. "I—I don't need a father, Da—Mr. Curtis. I—I—oh, I can't tell you how I feel toward you!"

The old man looked down at the convulsed little face wonderingly, then he bent to kiss the grief-twisted, childish mouth. But before his lips touched her, Winnie drew back sharply, her eyes widening as if with fright, a trembling hand going up to shield her mouth.

"Don't—don't! You mustn't—do that!" she gasped in a shaken whisper.

"But—why, my dear?" T. Q. asked in genuine astonishment. "I've kissed you often enough, child, and you didn't seem to find me repulsive before."

"That's it!" Winnie moaned, covering her face with her hands. "I—I haven't found you repulsive! I want you to kiss me so much that I don't—I don't dare let you do it! Oh, Mr. Curtis, you've been so blind, so blind!"

"I—Winnie, I'm afraid I don't understand!" he gasped.

A sudden, shy, intensely sweet smile flashed out at him through her tears. "I—I think you do!"

He gathered her into his arms then, fiercely, passion which he had thought dead for years surging through his rapidly beating heart.

"Winnie, little sweetheart, Winnie! Do you want to stay here—with old T. Q.—as his wife?"

"Of course I do!" Winnie laughed softly, her arms tight about his neck, her flushed cheek rubbing provocatively against his. "Oh, T. Q., I do love you so! Haven't you—guessed? All these months that I've loved you, and called you my Daddy Curtis, and you were so blind—"

He was murmuring clumsy endearments into her ear, lifting the silvery blond hair with tender fingers as he did so, when he was startled by an incredible sound.

He looked at Winnie to make sure that the silly giggle had not come from her lips, but she was as startled as he, or appeared to be.

"Someone is in the room!" T. Q. almost shouted, as he sprang from his seat on the edge of the bed.

"No, no! You imagined it! Or it was someone outside!" Winnie cried out in panic.

But T. Q. strode to the thick taffeta draperies that hung to the floor before the great bay window. When he yanked them viciously aside, Viola, the colored maid, stood revealed, a hand clapped to her mouth, her eyes rolling with ludicrous fear.

"What do you mean by hiding in here and spying on Miss Winnie?" T. Q. thundered.

Viola's frightened eyes rolled ludicrously from T. Q. to Winnie, but she kept her hand tightly clamped over her mouth. Winnie sprang from the bed and rushed to the colored maid, seizing her arm to shake her.

"What were you hiding in here for?" she shrieked in a metallic voice from which all sweetness had departed. "How did you get in here? When I was asleep?" Her pale blue eyes blazed into the rolling black eyes of the maid as if she were trying to get across a message which she dared not put into words.

"Take your hands off me, white girl!" Viola's hand dropped from her mouth with astonishing abruptness. "Ain't gonna get me in Dutch with Mr. Curtis, you ain't. You told me to hide in here and listen to ever' word the old fool said—that's what she called you, Mr. Curtis—the old fool! I guess I ain't gonna get myself fired on your account, I ain't!"

Winnie dropped her hold upon the maid and flung herself against T. Q.'s breast. "Don't believe her, Daddy Curtis! She's lying—"

"Who's lying?" Viola uttered a scream of animal rage. "I'll show you. Who, give me this twenty-dollar bill to hide here and listen?"

She snatched a yellow-backed bill from her apron pocket and waved it in the face of the white-faced terrified girl. "Mr. Curtis, she wanted a witness so's if you tried to get out of this she'd have the goods on you!"

"That will do, Viola. I understand," T. Q. said heavily. "Get control of yourself and go tell Mrs. Meadows and Miss Wells that I want to see them immediately in the library. Then go to your own room and stay there, without speaking to anyone, until I send for you."

"Yes, sir!" Viola backed out of the room, her eyes still rolling with terror.

"Oh, what are you going to do to me, Daddy Curtis?" Winnie collapsed upon the bed, weeping and shivering with fear.

(To Be Continued)

With Winnie out of the way there is no one in Billy's path. In the next chapter, though, she makes a confession.

ABE MARTIN
"I've allus knowed a corset salesman 'll defend its young, but in all th' thirty years I've battled with crime I've never knowed one t' deliberately attack any-buddy, even when hard pressed for food," says Constable Newt Plum. Who remembers when we couldn't get a drink on Sunday.

harping at a waiter to bring on another patty (though sometimes with very little luck), the French system is absurd. And having once succeeded in getting a supply, he'd better keep his vigilant eyes on it. Because when he has concluded with his beads, or celery the waitress will put on one of these snappy raids and he'll have to set up a loud yowl of protest in order to have it returned to the table. So, if you're a legionnaire and are going over in September, just remember—
To get some butter, whether in St. Quentin, Nevers or Is-sur-Tille, just say:
"One Pittsburgh."

In order to retain it throughout the course of the meal, watch the waitress closely. When she sweeps down to snatch the plate away just crack her knuckles with a knife or a fork. That will be significant and it is quite likely that she will understand that customary poaching is not allowed.

AMBOY NEWS
Amboy—The Township High School manual training class of 1927 have had on display in the Elchier store windows an exhibition of their skill. There is quite a variety, many of which are useful pieces of furniture.

W. J. Smith, representative of the Dixon Evening Telegraph was in Amboy on business Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Meyers and Mrs. W. F. Cotter and daughter Marie were Rockford visitors Monday.

Mrs. Jesse Grissom has been visiting with relatives and friends in Foreston for the past week.

Maurice Wilton, son of Supt. Geo. Wilton, met with a painful accident Tuesday when he fell from a lumber wagon one foot catching in a wheel and dragging him. Fortunately for Maurice the wagon was stopped before he received any serious injuries.

Frank Janssen of Nelson and his orchestra met for practice at the Carl Hegert home Sunday afternoon. Miss Helen Hegert is pianist.

The manual training class of the Junior High School have finished their work for the year and have some very fine specimens which will be on exhibition at the Lee County Fair in August.

The Junior High School and the grades will hold their annual field day and picnic at the City Park, Tuesday, May 24th. The day will be spent in a picnic dinner and games. Everyone is hoping it will be a nice day.

May and June from Radio Station WLS will appear in person at the Shadows Theater Sunday evening May 22. Also Walter Peterson, the southern melody impersonator and the feature picture "Don't Tell the Wife" starring Irene Rich.

Mrs. Joseph Hammond underwent an operation for appendicitis Monday at the Amboy hospital. Mrs. Hammond is getting along as well as can be expected.

The Royal Neighbors held a card party in their hall Thursday evening. Mrs. Pomeroy of Lee Center received first prize. Refreshments were served and a good time enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gillispie are the proud parents of a baby girl born Thursday evening, May 19, 1927.

Life, Labor and Money
Life is energy. For energy exercised in the production of things, whether by hand or brain, we get what we call money. Money is called a standard of values and a medium of exchange, but it is more than that.

Money is life. It is our energy transmuted. It is the equivalent of the time and energy spent in producing something. So that we can look at the money and truthfully say "that is part of me."

Saving money therefore is storing up for future use part of ourselves. And wasting money is wasting life and robbing it of future ease and comfort.
